ARSENAL ON TOP AGAIN
AWAY WIN OVER DERBY BY 4 TO 2
POMPEY, LOSE TO CHELSEA.
STOCKPORT DROP POINTS AT BARROW

London, To-day. Vanquished at Liverpool on Saturday, Derby County lost at home yesterday to the Arsenal by a decisive margin to enable the champions to regain the leadership of the premier division of the English Football League.

The Spurs received a check at Stoke where the City who accompanied them into the premier league at the commencement of the season, scored twice without reply.

Both Cup finalists lost by four clear goals away from home, Pompey giving Chelsea the points to displace Sheffield United from the foot of the table. The Pensioners beat West Bromwich Saturday and are making a magnificent effort to avoid relegation.

VILLA WIN AT LAST
Aston Villa secured badly needed points when they overwhelmed Sheffield United at Villa Park.

Brentford's hopes of promotion received a setback at home when Grimsby, the present leaders, won by the odd goal in three.

Lincoln sank further, Swansea taking a brace of points which may enable them to escape the danger zone.

RECOVERY IN U.S.

"SIGNS OF IMMEDIATE REVIVAL"

STEEL INDUSTRY IMPROVES.

OPTIMISTIC SURVEYS OF BUSINESS

Fashions From The Museums

Designs Copied From Old China Tapestries.

ANGORA FOR TOWN WEAR

Many of the spring tweeds, jerseys and silks are so woven as to resemble fine tapestries. The various yarns are dyed to special shades before being woven together, so that masterly colour effects are obtained.

One can admire a length of stuff as a work of art, and the simpler the way in which it is made up the better.

A practical point about the new materials is that although so soft and light, they are skilfully worked so that they do not pull in all directions as soft stuffs were apt to do formerly. These woolen mixtures are wonderfully warm.

Shepherd's Plaid.

Shepherd's plaid reappears in black-and-white check, both in the bold and the small design. It looks well on steamer, race course, or for the town tailor-made. Some this season are preferred with the broken or spotted check. Brown and cream is good in a large design, worn with a heavy brown tweed or light wool overcoat.

Angora Fashionable

The Angoras have a feathery look, and pastel shades are to the fore. Angora-smart town wear. Grey and dull-surfaced fabrics are good, if black is momentarily departed from.

There are always a few adherents to purple—a very dark purple. Brown and yellow are good sunshine shades, and nothing is smarter than a dark brown tweed with corrugated surface, complete with yellow hat, blouse, or tune.

A striped yellow and brown silk-and-wool mixture looked very well as a dress, worn with a rough not-brown tweed sac coat, with a double scarf-collar fastening across with huge brown and yellow wood buttons.

Neck Lines To Suit Wearer.

Neck-lines are now finished in any way to suit the wearer. The bateau-line is young, so is the small round neck. Older women have returned to the small V, or else a deep one, with a collar that can, where required, fasten right up to the throat.

For evening, the wide, low, square decolletage is much worn. The exaggerated bare back is no longer considered good style.

Waist-lines are normal, or set lower. Hips are slim. Neat, collarless tailored coats, short or long, are pinched in just a little at the waist. Lengths, like coats, vary with the occasion.

Tweed Sports Skirts.

Sports' skirts and tailored tweeds may be a little shorter, but the average skirt is to the calf. Ankle-length is correct for afternoon and semi-evening, while full dinner dress shows slender trains and skirt trimming low at the back.

Bringing Up Father.

Cocktail Frock

When it's cocktail time in Spring, the orange-topped blouse is in order. So says Dame Fashion. Here, Gertrude Michael introduces a model topped off with white orange, accented with bands of bright blue and a large bow. The skirt, attached to the blouse, is high waisted and of bright blue crepe flannel.

Attractive Earclips In Enamel

Semi-Precious Stones For Dress Decorations.

Some of the new earclips are very attractive in coloured or black enamel with a very narrow silver edge. You can have them in green or a bright, dark blue, and, for the evening, they are set with paste.

For hats or handbags, or to wear on the dress itself, there are delightful large clips in semi-precious stones. Most of them are in the shape of a leaf with a frog sitting on top.

The most realistic one has its leaf of chrysoprase and the frog of cornelian, but some of the other colour combinations are even more pleasing.

NECKLINE IMPORTANT IN SPRING DRESSES

Watch the neckline in the new spring dresses. It counts. In fact, it marks one of the really decisive changes that make the difference between what was and what now is the fashion.

Menu Suggestions For To-morrow

Mexican Chilli Con Carne
Soused Pigs Feet
Mustard Sauces
Salade Lorette
Golden Peach Ring
DINNER
Cassoulet a la Richelieu

Mexican Chilli Con Carne

Take 2 lb. of meat, cut in small pieces and put in a frying-pan where 3 tablespoons of lard have been heated, cooking until slightly brown. Have ready a small blade of garlic, salt and pepper to taste, a medium sized onion and 2 or 3 ripe tomatoes cut in slices. First add garlic and onion to the meat, let cook for 20 or 30 minutes and add tomatoes, salt and pepper and 2 tablespoons of paprika, mixing thoroughly with one-half cupful of hot water, let boil until meat is very tender, add additional hot water as needed. This dish needs considerable gravy. If desired 1/2 teaspoonful of sugar and one teaspoonful of vinegar may be added 15 to 20 minutes before serving.

Salade Lorette.

Take the heart portion of a Hong Kong celery, 2 hearts of lettuce, 2 boiled potatoes, 2 small beetroots and 4 oz. ham. Trim, wash, and drain or peel and cut into fine shreds the above named ingredients; season these with tomato mayonnaise, salt, pepper and paprika, and mix gently with 1 gill liquid aspic. Stir and pour into a plain mould or pudding basin and place in refrigerator until set. Unmould into a saucer dish, and garnish with whites of hard-boiled eggs, beetroot, and sliced olives.

Golden Peach Ring.

A large tin of peaches, 1 oz. of shelled walnuts, 1/2 oz. of gelatine, 3 dessertspoons of sugar, or to taste, 1/2 gills of milk, 1 egg, lemon juice. Drain the syrup from the peaches and rub through a sieve sufficient to give half a pint of pulp. Make a boiled custard with the egg and milk, and leave it to cool. Add the lemon juice from half a lemon and sugar to the peach pulp, and stir in the finely chopped walnuts, and the custard. Dissolve the gelatine in a saucepan with 1 gill of the peach syrup, and strain it into the mixture. Add more sugar if required. Leave the mixture till it begins to thicken, then turn it into a border mould, and when set, unmould it and serve with the remainder of the peaches. Serves 5 or 6 persons.

Consomme a la Richelieu.

2 quarts game consomme, 2 small fillets of cooked game, 2 carrots (small), 1 oz. minute tapioca, 1 gill royal custard cut into cubes, seasoning. Remove the skin from the fillets of cooked game, and cut the meat into fine shreds or Julienne strips. Scoop out some little "ball" shapes from the carrots and cook them in salted water till tender. Cook the tapioca in boiling consomme for about 15 minutes, then add it to the consomme of game. Next add the cooked carrots and let the consomme simmer gently for about 10 minutes. Skin and season to taste. Put the prepared and cut

FLOWERS BLOOM FOR YOUTH

Becoming To Slim Figures.

Bloused-bodices are especially a good choice where girls make their own clothes. The bloused waist-line is good for youth, and easy in the soft crepes and satins. The "loose" look is becoming to slim figures, and the normal waist-line is not the rule. Such styles are largely helped by the belt, that can be pulled anywhere it is required. Soft supple suede and leather or wide satin ribbon is the ideal belt to wear with the bloused-bodice in thin fabric.

There will be plenty of the dull-faced satins used, especially for evening wear. They form a good foundation for the sequins that are woven in.

Lame is another material which seems to have taken fresh lease of life. The softly shaded coloured lames are employed for the cinema blouse, that is worn over a skirt of black satin or summer velvet.

cubes of custard in a soup tureen, pour over the consomme and serve.

NOVELTY TIME IN LONDON SHOPS

Bonnet Hats New Evening Style.

London.

Between the first of the London spring fashion openings and the last of the winter sales novelties in dress details are shown here and there in the exclusive shops where the coming trend of fashion is studied. Among the most important of these new ideas are the fascinating little "bonnet" hats for evening, which have captured the approval of well-dressed women, mainly because they are so becoming to the right type of feature and give an absolutely new line to the ensemble.

For evening wear at the theatre or restaurant, the "bonnet" is made in stiffened and wired gauze or net. The up-standing, rather turned-back brim is wired-in coronet shape, or there may be a close garland of lacquered feather, or mother-of-pearl flowers. These youthful little bonnets should fit the crown of the (Continued at Foot of Next Col.)

BRIDGE NOTES

PLAY OF THIRD
HAND.

An old Whist rule was that on the first round of a suit you should play your highest card third hand in order to strengthen your partner. This was on the principle that he is leading from his strong suit and wants the winning card of it out of his way. You, therefore, do not finesse, but play your highest, remembering, of course, that you play the lowest of a sequence.

Admirable as this was as a general rule at Whist, even at that game there were several exceptions which Cavendish was at pains to explain. At Bridge, with Dummy exposed, conditions are different and the exceptions to the rule are much more numerous. Appreciation of the Eleven Rule when the leader opens his fourth best will indicate often situations where third hand should not play the highest card. The bidding and the Dummy's hand also frequently yield guidance. But as a rough and ready rule especially against No Trump declarations third hand high should be followed unless there is good reason for departing from it.

There is, however, one notable exception when, without any guidance from Dummy, third hand should not play high.

The position is when his partner leads a small card and he holds Ace, Queen, and another. The proper play in this position is the Queen, not the Ace. If partner has led from a suit King high the play of the Queen obviously does not matter. But if he has not the King, it may make a very great difference if it is put up on the first round.

An example from duplicate play illustrates:—

Y.
S.—8 5
H.—4 2
D.—7 6 4
C.—Q 10 9 5 3

A.
S.—9 6 3 2

D.—Q 8 2
C.—6 4

Z.

H.—S 8 5 3
D.—J 10 5 2
C.—A 7

Score, both sides vulnerable. Z is playing a contract of Three No Trumps.

At most tables A opened with the 8 of Spades—the conventional lead of the fourth best of his longest suit. B won with the Ace and returned the Queen. Z held up the King until the third round of Spades and then led the King of Clubs. B held up the Ace of Clubs for one round, but was forced to win on the second round. He could now lead only Hearts or Diamonds and Z made his contract with four tricks in Clubs, of two in Hearts, two in diamonds, and one in Spades.

On the 8 of Spades led B must play Queen, not his Ace. The reason is that, if he does, Z dare not hold up the King because for all to know A may have led from A and others, and Z will never make a trick in the suit. Mark the difference. On winning the first trick with the King of Spades Z must clear his Clubs, B wins and now A and B make four tricks in Spades and defeat the contract.

Now you may say that if A holds the Ace of Clubs, Z cannot win any way. That is true enough. But the point is that by playing the Ace on the first round B forces Z to the third round, thus exhausting B of the suit, an opportunity which the play of the Queen does not give him.

The correct play in this case should be known to every experienced player, yet, surprisingly, it only now finds its way into the duplicate system. It makes the difference between success and failure when B holds the King. The Queen should be played with the Queen, but if he can see that he will set up a trick for Dummy, Partner may have led from Ace to four and Dummy may hold the Queen.

There are numerous situations of the kind where third hand should not play his highest. But the Ace combination is the most important.

Where third hand holds King, Knave, and others, and partner leads a small card, he should play the King, not his Knave, unless by doing so he can see that he will set up a trick for Dummy. Partner

France Longing For A Leader

diately there would be a bloodshed, for most Frenchmen have weapons, and in a crisis do not hesitate to use them; but as the Government is fully aware of the danger there is no fear of this risk being run.

High Currency

Far more serious is the likelihood that the cleavage between Left and Right will increase in bitterness. If each side fears that the other may attempt to seize power there is a possibility that they may try to anticipate each other. It will require all the Prime Minister's prestige, and considerable self-sacrifice on the part of the political leaders in his Cabinet, to prevent the present distrust developing into something worse.

The economic condition of the country is not such as to improve tempers. The peasants and middle-classes would rise in revolt if the franc, which not so long ago was depreciated four-fifths of its value, were depreciated further.

Some of their members had to be chased by furious crowds yelling "a la Seine" for them to realize that things were perhaps not normal. Others who had their clothes torn off and were severely handled may now be persuaded that democracy does not necessarily consist of groups fighting for power and its spoils.

In the provinces for sixty years or so all the parties of the Left have voted together, bargained and helped each other at the polls. That tradition will not be broken. The parties of the Right will tend to coalesce, and above all to organize. In a few weeks people will be calmer, and they need to be.

And then? Who can tell? A dissolution perhaps. M. Doumergue has enough prestige to obtain the necessary Presidential decree, backed by a two-thirds majority vote of the Senate.

A General Election would no doubt do good in some ways, but it would not necessarily mean that complete change and revitalisation of the French people long for. There is not much to be hoped from the old political teams. Whilst the mob was fighting to penetrate the Chamber on that sinister Tuesday night of Feb. 6 they were playing the old party game, the only one they knew.

One thing is quite certain: neither the present Government, nor any that is likely to emerge from the elections—if there are any—will be able to cope with the formidable programme of constitutional and Parliamentary reform so many people yearn for.

Lost Confidence

Still less, indeed, could it take those drastic steps which would re-establish public confidence in the administration of the country and free it from the subterranean political influences the people loathe.

France longs for a leader, but, whoever he be, unless he emerges from a period of chaos he can ill dispense with the cloak of Republican democracy. He may fling it over his right shoulder or over his left; he cannot discard it.

In the absence of such a leader many people are asking themselves what will happen when the old men are too weary to go on governing, now that so many of the younger ones have been proved inadequate.

WALES BEAT CHINA IN INTERNATIONAL PODMORE OUTSTANDING IN CUP FINAL

PLUCKY JONES

(BY SPOT KICK)

A VERY LARGE CROWD SAW WALES DEFEAT CHINA IN THE FINAL ROUND OF THE SUNDAY HERALD INTERNATIONAL CHARITY CUP COMPETITION YESTERDAY ON THE CLUB GROUND BY 3 GOALS TO 1, AFTER LEADING BY TWO CLEAR GOALS AT THE INTERVAL.

For the winners Podmore proved himself the most outstanding player. He worked like a machine throughout the whole game, and was largely responsible for assisting the forwards to carry out their devastating onslaughts.

Smith, the Welsh goalkeeper, undoubtedly saved the Welsh team from several awkward situations, and he and Podmore may be easily vested with the laurels for a meritorious victory.

PAU KA PING PLAYED A MASTERLY GAME IN DEFENDING THE CHINESE GOAL, AND HAD IT NOT BEEN FOR HIS MAGNIFICENT DISPLAY THE WELSHMEN WOULD HAVE SCORED SEVERAL ADDITIONAL GOALS.

Jones is deserving praise after receiving, in the first few minutes of the match, a nasty injury to his knee which handicapped him throughout the remainder of the game. Despite his injury, however, he played a splendid game.

Credit is due to Mullane and Morrison, the Welsh full backs, who offered a very stubborn defense to the Chinese raids.

Lee Wai Tong scored the only goal for China, and he certainly deserved credit for his very fine performance.

The Welshmen brought with them the national emblem of Wales, the leek, and display it in their goal, but at the commencement of the second half of the game the Chinese protested against this procedure, and the referee ordered it to be removed.

WALES NEARLY SCORE

The Welshmen attacked with vigour from the start, and within two minutes of the opening of the game came near to scoring through Fortey. Pau Ka Ping slipping in attempting to save and only just managing to clear the ball.

China now attacked, and had a grand chance of scoring when Au Ping Ming had only Smith to beat from close range, but he shot wide. Again the Chinese advanced, but Ho Ka Keung fouled during the final advance movement and lost the chance of opening the score.

During these fierce attacks Mullane and Morrison played superb football, and on their form could be described as perhaps the two best full backs in the Colony this season.

Wales opened the scoring six minutes from the start when Pau Ka Ping ran out and tried to kick the ball clear of Matthias HAZELWOOD secured possession and scored.

SMITH'S BRILLIANCE

Following this a most remarkable performance was given by Smith in goal when the Chinese launched an onslaught after one assault in an endeavour to equalise. He saved and cleared three consecutive shots at goal from close range in brilliant manner.

Wales now returned to the attack and Jones, who was partially disabled, flashed in a first-time shot from 20 yards, and only just missed the upright.

Four minutes before the interval witnessed the second Welsh goal. Matthias transferred a timely pass to JONES who crushed it into the net with Pan helpless.

"BAD JOSE" REMOVED

Within a minute of commencing the second half Hazelwood hit the cross-bar from 20 yards.

The game was now held up for a few minutes while the Chinese protested against the leek being in the Welsh goal. This was then removed.

Hazelwood received his second

INDIA FORCE DRAW WITH ENGLAND

SCORE FIRST BUT EQUALISE IN CLOSING MINUTES

KALWANT SINGH AND LAL SINGH EXCEL ON LEFT WING

(BY STICKS)

ONE of the most exciting hockey games of the season was witnessed on the Marina ground yesterday when India forced England to a draw in the Final Round of the International Hockey Tournament, both sides scoring twice.

The match will be re-played at a later date.

India fielded their best team, but England were without the services of H. J. D. Lowe, who unavoidably arrived too late to participate. W. A. Reed took place as pivot, playing a remarkably good game and Cpl. Yeomans (Lincoln) deputised for Reed at right-half.

A. A. Dand, the English captain, was struck over the eye towards the end of the game by a ball which was under-cut by S. T. Mohamed, the opposing full-back, and, although he continued to play, moved to the forward line, and E. V. Reed filled his place in the defence.

At this juncture, England held the lead after a thrilling first-half, but the change proved fatal in that India obtained the equaliser within a few minutes of time to the accompaniment of frenzied cheering from the large crowd of Indian supporters.

The Play

India were on the offensive from the start and made many dangerous visits to their opponents' goal. England took some time to settle down, mis-hits and fumbling being frequent on the sodden ground.

India, however, secured an early lead through Kalwant Singh, following a perfect movement on the right-wing.

Atkinson missed two glorious opportunities for England to reply when, with only the goalkeeper to beat, he shot wide. England continued to press hard and forced a number of corners, but were unable to find the net, poor marksmanship being the fault.

Lal Singh's Speed

Lal Singh's terrific speed on the left-wing, and fine combination with Kalwant Singh soon proved a menace, and Dand was fully extended to cope with the Punjabi winger. Dand, however, was very steady, and cleared strongly under the heaviest pressure.

Hocquard led many fine attacks for England, but the forward line, being starved, was slightly off form while Barlett missed a number of opportunities. Atkinson played well, in spite of his poor marksmanship.

Gardhwaile was the pick of the forward line, always working hard and combining well with the other players.

Dull Singh was a very formidable Indian pivot, while P. Singh was very safe. Ayan Singh missed several good chances, and the forward line, in the danger, lay in the combined movements between Kalwant Singh and Lal Singh.

India enjoyed most of the play in the second half. Metcalfe and the right-wing combination was weak in comparison.

India's best chance was when, with only the goalkeeper to beat, he shot wide. England continued to press hard and forced a

ARSENAL ON TOP AGAIN

Charlton experienced defeat at Reading where the biscuit-men are preparing for a season in the Second Division. Nowich, however, won to maintain their useful lead.

Stockport's defeat at Barrow and Barnsley's home success over Mansfield saw the County ousted from second place to Chesterfield in the northern section.

Chesterfield were checked at Southport where no goals were scored, but their lead is so great that the setback is not a serious one.

ROCHDALE AGAIN FAIL.

Rotherham garnered a valuable point against Walsall, but Rochdale again dropped points, and are now almost certain to be doomed to relegation.

Third Lanark offered spirited resistance to Glasgow Rangers, but were unable to hold the Scottish champions, while Clyde suffered a similar fate at Parkhead.

No Continuing Air Inferiority.

Britain's Air Force Estimates are designed by the Government to serve two purposes. What increase is proposed is a warning to other Powers that Britain cannot and will not accept a position of permanent inferiority in the air. At the same time the actual increase is on so small a scale as not to jeopardise her efforts to bring about air disarmament. The British Government puts a choice before the greater nations. Either other Powers agree to disarm to her level or she shall build, not in the modest way now proposed, but so as to make Britain the equal in the air of the most powerful nation in the world. In matters of defence Great Britain can ultimately accept no inferior standing. By the slight increase of its Estimates the Government lays itself open to attack from two sides. On the one hand it is condemned for leaving the country dangerously weak in air armament, on the other it is blamed for starting what is ridiculously called a new competition before it has exhausted the possibility of negotiation. The reply to both schools is to be found in the memorandum that accompanies the Estimates. Did conditions in the world suggest any serious threat to Britain then the actual addition to the Air Forces would occasion serious alarm by their inadequacy. The new construction and organisation proposed leaves Britain short by many hundreds of machines of the strength of France, Russia, Japan, Italy, or the United States, and all these nations are in the current year making greater additions to their air strength than is Great Britain. With four additional squadrons the Air Force will be weaker by some eight squadrons than the minimum of fifty-two squadrons regarded as necessary for home defence ten years ago. The Marquis of Londonderry rightly expressed himself as satisfied with the increased rate at which the albums were already filling, and we may believe that the Ministry and the local authorities have not been idle. But there have been critics with accusations of dilatoriness, and it would be well to know the actual achievement will do little to bridge the widening gap between the present strength of the Force and the needs of the air services of other Great Powers. The increase can only be regarded as an urgent hint that if building should be continued the shall not hesitate to do so. An undocumented suggestion may be of interest. The Minister of Health has recently issued a circular to every branch of the country, asking the Ministry of Health to be kept fully informed of the needs of British Guiana being dealt with without patience are running out. Britain has taken great risks in the effort to induce the world to disarm. It cannot continue to persuade by example in the absence of any real response. The steady reduction of her forces has been carried to the point at which it occasions serious apprehension. For the time it is still possible to hold her hands, in the slight hope that endeavour to reduce armaments elsewhere may bear fruit, but the moment has come when either the Disarmament negotiations must have more reality or Britain must make answer to the armaments of others. The better way to peace is by reductions all round. The alternative involves the sacrifice of the hopes for national betterment built upon improving finance. Even so, Britain could have no hesitation as to what was the right course. If the warning that lies behind the present Estimates were not heeded abroad there would remain only one course by which the country could be made easy in its mind as regards security.

A National Reproach.

In a recent speech at Manchester Sir Hilton Young, British Health Minister, returned once more to the slum problem, which must at present preoccupy above all others a Minister of Health. In co-operation with local authorities, the Ministry have been planning ahead during the past twelve months, and it is interesting to observe that whereas last autumn Sir Hilton Young contemplated that 210,000 unit houses would be replaced within the next five years, the number now foreseen is about 250,000. In each of the five years of the campaign it is intended to clear an average of 50,000 slum dwellings, as many as were removed in the whole sixty years preceding the present effort. The task has certainly long awaited action, and the only reason for our generation to take pride is that we are all, as the Prince of Wales urged a few weeks ago, beginning to be less patient with bad housing. Sir Hilton Young expressed himself as satisfied with the increased rate at which the albums were already filling, and we may believe that the Ministry and the local authorities have not been idle. But there have been critics with accusations of dilatoriness, and it would be well to know the actual achievement will do little to bridge the widening gap between the present strength of the Force and the needs of the air services of other Great Powers. The increase can only be regarded as an urgent hint that if building should be continued the shall not hesitate to do so. An undocumented suggestion may be of interest. British West African possessions have hitherto been immune from the onslaughts of Japanese traders. Some months ago, however, it was announced that a Japanese mercantile service had been started to West Africa.

The first results appear in the report on Sierra Leone textile imports for Jan. November. It is published in the "Board of Trade Journal."

The figures are: November, 1932: Japanese textile imports nil. November, 1933: 227,000 square yards.

The British imports in November totalled 513,000 square yards.

New York To Odessa

For the first time since the Revolution an American ship has called at a Russian port.

Her arrival at Odessa marks the inception of a regular cargo steamer service.

In the summer there will be a service of passenger boats for tourists.

The visitors will find Odessa sadly decayed. In Tsarist days it was one of the three Russian towns where the British Government kept a Consul-general.

To-day trade has declined, and in view of its proximity to the Romanian frontier the Bolsheviks have restrained from sinking capital in the city.

Odessa is a healthy resort. The tourists may be attracted by the beach. Sun-bathing (on trade union tickets) has been rationalised to such a point that loud-speakers dictate the proportions in which immersion and exposure shall be mixed by the care-free bathers.

Experiments in California have shown that forest fires can be controlled and even extinguished with blasts from motion picture machines, especially if sand is thrown into the currents of air.

An English railway is using track laying machines that remove an old 60 foot section and replace it with new 100 foot rails with an expenditure of about one half and another of hand labour.

FRANCE LONGING
FOR A LEADERWHAT WILL HAPPEN WHEN THE OLD MEN IT KNOWS AND TRUSTS HAVE GONE?

(By Brig.-Gen. E. L. Spears, M.P.)

The crisis that shook France during the second week in February was purely the affair of Paris. The provinces were disengaged, and disliked it all intensely, because they did not understand what was happening.

"We will not have revolution by telegram," they said. The shrewd, slow-moving peasants, the peaceful bourgeoisie of the little towns, and, indeed, of the great ones, too, were shocked and frightened to see two Governments in succession fall at the threat of riots by the Paris mob.

What did they care about M. Chiffre, the Prefect of Police, and whether he was dismissed or not? The Stavisky scandal? It only proved there were lots of things wrong in the capital. It all came of trying to acquire money in new-fangled ways instead of just toiling and saving according to the tradition of France.

In fact, the provinces had an uncomfortable feeling that something very like a Fascist coup had been attempted and had failed, whereas the Paris bourgeoisie were, on the contrary, persuaded that they had narrowly escaped a dictatorship of the Left. The result of this frame of mind in the country is that were there an election now the provinces would in all probability return the same paralysing Left majority which has proved itself incapable of governing.

Red Belt Of Paris

Paris, on the other hand, is pleased with itself. It feels that it has given Parliament a richly deserved lesson, that it has struck a blow on behalf of honest government that will not easily be forgotten.

But the Paris you can see to-day, spick and span, as if nothing had happened, with the beautiful illuminated fountains playing in the Place de la Concorde as if a short time ago cavalry had not been charging across it, forgets that the trade unions, the unions of officials, and the workers of the Red Belt in Paris and the great industrial cities, completely paralysed the nation for twenty-four hours at the behest of their leaders.

It is the fashion to belittle the General Strike of February 12, and to say it did not fulfil the expectations of those who planned it. It may be true that the middle-class who are steadily organising themselves, may in future be able to negative a prolonged general strike as we did ourselves, and that a strong Government could deal with it as Briand dealt with the railway strike by mobilising the workers; but the fact remains that on Feb. 12 the organisations of the Left revealed themselves to be very strong indeed.

Trace Of Parties

To-day all is calm. There is no sign of resentment against the police, but most people realise that this is but a lull, a truce, an act of national deference to the lovable old man, Doumergue, who commands the absolute trust of all, and who in the twilight of long and useful life has made the great sacrifice of his well-earned peace in deference to his country's call.

How long will this truce last? It is perhaps hardly realised here how great was the danger which the fall of the Daldieu Government averted.

When Daldieu, who had tried so hard to form a Government, who had forfeited the support of the Right by sacrificing the Prefect of Police, Chiffre, and who did not dare defy Paris and rely on Socialist support, realised the seals of office, he did so only just in time. The people, this time in arms, were baying into the streets again.

The troops would not have marched against the demonstrators. Their leaders revolted at the idea of shooting down their old comrades.

It is doubtful if the Prime Minister and his colleagues would have been deposed by day but M. Blum's achievement, the undisputed success of the Red workers, meant that the Red bourgeoisie, the revolutionaries, the principal leaders of the Red Belt, were aghast. The stronger, better organised, more determined and far angrier die-class demonstrators would have carried the day, but not without bloodshed. If there had been more bloodshed no one can say to what lengths public indignation would have gone. With no strong man to take charge, anarchy might have gained the day.

Now peace reigns in Paris once more, but it may be only a lull.

Trust in Doumergue

All the Daldieu team of young men have been swept away with their leader, and the country has turned again, as it has done so often before, to the old men it knows and trusts.

Gaston Doumergue, ex-President of the Republic, forced back into the turmoil of affairs he had long ago determined to abandon for ever, has had to leave his sunny garden near Toulouse, his bees, and his flowers, to sit once more in the high-tapestried rooms of the Prime Minister. Marshal Pétain, who saved the French armies after the mutiny of 1917, and who is now 78 years old, is at the Ministry of War; Barthou, another old man, is at the Foreign Office.

Doumergue, such is his prestige, has drawn into his Cabinet the leaders of all parties save the Socialists. Herriot sits at peace with Tardieu. All have undertaken not to make public speeches, a severe restriction when, as in the case of Tardieu, there exists a belief that a campaign in the country would rally it to his standard and ruin the prospects of the Radical Socialists, who form the majority in the present Chamber.

It is very unlikely that the present Government can last for long. The old Prime Minister has but one weapon in his armoury when facing Parliament, the threat of returning to his distant country home.

What Will Follow?

It is twenty years since he spoke in the Chamber, and in that space of time Parliamentary manners have sadly deteriorated. Conditions had, in fact, become almost anarchical under the last President of the Chamber, the Socialist Ferdinand Buisson. Speakers got into the way of speaking on any subject without restrictions shouting and ill-mannered interruptions were the commonplace of debate, and the lobbies, if not the floor of the House, were the scenes of not infrequent disputes.

"LISTENING-IN" TO GERMANY*"Jimmy's" Proprietor Disappointed.*$250 WIRELESS SET*Deception Established By Court

A claim against Mr. W. G. Wandres, the proprietor of Jimmy's Kitchen, Wan Chai, for $200, being the outstanding balance on the price of a wireless set purchased from Messrs. Brandt and Company, 6 Des Vaux Road Central, was disallowed by the Puisane Judge, Mr. R. E. Lindsell, at the Supreme Court this morning, judgment with costs being awarded to the defendant.

Mr. A. el Arculli appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. T. P. K. Kemble was counsel for the defendant.

Mr. Kemble said that his client purchased a wireless set from the plaintiffs on December 19 last for $250, paying a deposit of $50. It was claimed that the apparatus was capable of receiving European stations, whereas actually it could not, difficulty being experienced in obtaining even local reception. The dealers, added counsel, made various excuses, and, although adjustments were made to the set, it refused to satisfy. The defendant demanded that the set be returned, but plaintiffs refused.

Not Correct Description.

The defence, said Mr. Kemble, was that the wireless set in question did not answer the description given.

The defendant, in evidence, said that the set was sold to him by Mr. Wandres, as "assistant" of Messrs. Brandt and Company. It was described as an "all-wave set" and capable of receiving European stations. After the set was installed at his home at 42 Lockhart Road, Wan Chai, no results could be obtained, and, despite adjustments, no improvement was made.

Mr. Arculli put it to the witness that he had asked for a long wave set.

Witness—"No, that is a lie. I asked for an "all-wave" set so that I could get Germany."

He explained that he had expected to obtain New York and Manila stock quotations from the set, and German stations for his amusement, but he could obtain neither.

Mr. Arculli—"Were you not told that you could get European station by transmission?"—"Yes, but the only station that could be received by transmission was—the relay from Daventry by the local station. I wanted to get Germany."

A Switch Knob. Lotahar Hamm, the Second Officer and wireless operator of the s.s. Michael Jebsen, said that he examined the radio set, and was of the opinion that it was impossible to get German stations, as it was a long wave set and not a short wave one. He said that Mr. Wandres, when adjusting the set at Mr. Haefke's home, had pointed out that the two knobs were for near and distant stations.

Witness said that he would state that one of the knobs was only to switch the set from the radio to the gramophone pick-up.

Cross-examined by Mr. Arculli, witness said that he was familiar with radio sets and had built one of his own.

Mr. Arculli—"Would it not have been stupid of Mr. Wandres to claim that the set was capable of receiving German stations if, in fact, it was not?"

Witness—"I suppose it was said more or less for business reasons."

Further questioned, witness said that Mr. Wandres described the set as a long and short wave combination set with a gramophone pick-up.

Witness added that with such a set it was only possible to obtain German stations through Hong Kong.

Mr. Wandres' Evidence. Mr. Wandres, in evidence, said that the defendant was told that the set was only a long wave set, but bought it, saying that he only wanted to get Manila. He said that he had told the defendant that he could only obtain German stations if they were transmitted by the local station, and denied that he had claimed that it was an "all-wave" set.

Witness here interrupted with, "It is a lie."

Obvious Case of Deceit.

Mr. Kemble, then cross-examined the witness, and asked if, in fact, the set was capable of obtaining German stations in Hong Kong other than through local transmission.

Witness—"I don't know."

Mr. Wandres—"You don't know."

The Hong Kong Whampoa Dock tug, Henry Keswick, which rendered valuable assistance in towing the vessel off the reef returned to Hong Kong this morning.

The vessel is owned by the Chinese Eastern Commercial Railway Agency, and was travelling from Leningrad to Vladivostock.

He explained that he had expected to obtain New York and Manila stock quotations from the set, and German stations for his amusement, but he could obtain neither.

Mr. Arculli—"Were you not told that you could get European station by transmission?"—"Yes, but the only station that could be received by transmission was—the relay from Daventry by the local station. I wanted to get Germany."

Mr. Arculli—"Would it not have been stupid of Mr. Wandres to claim that the set was capable of receiving German stations if, in fact, it was not?"

Further questioned, witness said that Mr. Wandres described the set as a long and short wave combination set with a gramophone pick-up.

Mr. Wandres' Evidence. Mr. Wandres, in evidence, said that the defendant was told that the set was only a long wave set, but bought it, saying that he only wanted to get Manila. Today's Short Story*THE ALBATROSS*By Hector Bolitho.

I MET Captain Angermann for the first time in Bremenhaven before the war. He lived in a jolly little blue and white house, away from the docks and crowded buildings of the port. The front path led up to the door, under four arches of huge bleached whalebones. From the front arch he had suspended a small lifebelt, with the name of the house, Sans Souci, painted on it, in his own meticulous letters.

Captain Angermann was good-looking in a hard, Prussian sort of way. He was dark and strong, and he walked arrogantly. He was something of a scholar, too, for he had edited a book on sea birds. He was more proud of this than of having taken a full-rigged ship around the Horn before he was thirty.

I had been asked by a publisher in Munich to write a treatise on albatrosses. It may sound dull, written down like that. But no man could think albatrosses dull, once he had seen them; white, big, and sharp-winged, wheeling above the blue silk water of the Pacific, their mighty wings stretched fourteen feet across the sky. I used to see them off the New Zealand coast, myself stretched on the sun-baked deck, lazy, hot, stripped to the waist, watching their big wings which never seemed to tire, their rhythmic whirling, their sudden swoop down to the tide when a steward threw potato peelings over the side of the ship.

It was no pain of trial to me when driving his car near the University Recreation ground, Wong Ping-shan was fined $25 by Mr. E. W. Hamilton at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Assistant Police Superintendent Grant, in evidence, stated that when driving his car near the University Recreation Ground, Pokfulam, defendant pulled across to the right-hand side of the road and pushed him into the side channel, giving no signal of his intention. Defendant had a fokir standing on the running board of the lorry which would have obscured any signals he might have given.

In suing Wong, Mr. Hamilton warned him that his licence would be stopped if he gave any further trouble.

But there are many sea birds," he said. "Why is it that you are interested mostly in albatrosses?"

"It is mostly because I have always thought them interesting and strong and beautiful," I answered.

"They have so much more character than—eagles, or, any other birds, for that matter—it is difficult to explain—but I always think there is something half-human about them."

Captain Angermann smiled, his slow lips moving and showing his white, pointed teeth. "That is true; there is something half-human about them. But it is not for this that you care. Your father says that you wish to know of their nests at Tristan da Cunha."

Ernst Angermann had been at Tristan. He opened a portfolio full of minute and patiently made drawings on pale-blue paper. With his quick, sharp hands turning over the leaves, he told me what I had set out to know. He had seen the strange albatross courtship dances, he had seen their lonely white eggs, lying upon the open ground. He had measured them and watched them and each little fact that fell so glibly from his lips was illustrated by one of the hundreds of little sketches. There was one of a bird, its wings fourteen feet spread, so heavy with food that it lay, gorged and inert, upon the rocks. I had never seen such drawings, with line-like details of rocks and wings, and, about the edge of each page, minute sketches of beaks and wings and claws.

My pencil moved rapidly as he spoke and, at the end, he chose one drawing of an albatross in flight and lifted it up from the portfolio. He had coloured it with Chinese white, so that, drawn upon the blue paper, it looked as if it flew against the sky.

"And this drawing you must accept from me," he said.

"There you have found what I always see," I told him. "You have made the bird seem mournful and remote—do you know what I mean?"

"—no other bird has as much expression. It is absurd to think that there could be much expression on the face of a bird. But here you have it. It is half in their eyes. A sort of human sensibility; anybody who has seen them, fly must have seen it too, don't you think?"

"You are right," he said. "But do you know the legend about the albatross? Do you know that we people of the sea believe that they bear the souls of dead mariners in their white breasts?"

I said that I, too, had heard the story and I quoted him then the lines from "The Ancient Mariner."

"But more than that," he said.

In the archives in Bremen there is a diary of an early captain which I have seen. He sailed, far away, in strange places, more than two hundred years ago. I did not read it all when I was allowed to see it some years ago. But there was a long account of a journey he made around the Horn. I have been thinking myself, in a full-rigged ship, and 48.11 respectively, while bonds advanced 0.5 to 92.67. Utilities declined 0.6 to 25.66. The commodity index closed at 53.81.

Business was average, 1,370,000 shares being traded.

In their market report, Messrs. E. A. Pier and Company, through their local correspondents, Messrs. Asia Lands, Ltd., state:

"We think the market continues to give a satisfactory account of itself, though the volume did not greatly increase. We believe that a few days of continued firmness would have material effect on the general sentiment."

"Wheat: The market fluctuated erratically within a range of one cent, averaging somewhat lower.

Privity estimate of American Wheat, which averaged $10,000,000 bushels, which was about as expected and which is considered bearish.

"Cotton: Last week's average old bales liquidated moderately, while there was some further selling of new deliveries."

Mr. Justice Lindsell said that he was satisfied on the evidence that the set sold was purported to be a long and short wave combination, whereas it was admitted by the plaintiff that it was only a long wave set. He, therefore, awarded judgment with costs to the defendant.

Witness—"I don't know."

Mr. Justice Lindsell—"You don't know."

You Can't Fool A "Blood Test"

CLAIMS are one thing; proof is another. For two generations the manufacturers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have published letters from people who said they had recovered from weak, nervous, run-down, anaemic conditions by the use of these pills. These people were not doctors; their evidence, truthful and authentic as it was not proof.

One Sure Test of Any "Blood" Remedy.

There is one sure proof of the efficiency of any remedy for thin blood, run-down, tired-out conditions. That is the power of the remedy to build up the haemoglobin content of the blood. Fortunately, modern science can accurately measure this. In weak, run-down, anaemic conditions the haemoglobin content of the blood is always below normal. The modern physician can tell pretty accurately just how much energy and strength you have from the haemoglobin content of your blood. If a blood test shows that your haemoglobin is 40 per cent below normal then your energy, vigour and strength are also approximately 40 per cent below normal.

What Haemoglobin Does.

It's the haemoglobin in your blood that carries life-giving oxygen from the lungs and nutrient from the digestive organs to the innermost cells of every organ and tissue of the body. The haemoglobin also clears the system of poisons. A blood stream deficient in haemoglobin fails to properly build up the system and to clear it of poisons. To restore a run-down, anaemic person to normal, the haemoglobin must be built up. A remedy that cannot do so is worthless. One that can do so safely, quickly and positively is a valuable medicinal preparation.

To prove the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills arrangements were made with a reputable physician to test a group of typical run-down, anaemic patients. Blood tests were taken before the patients were started on a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and again one month later. There were eleven people in the group.

Results of The "Blood Test" of These Patients.

Ten patients in the group increased their haemoglobin the first month as follows: 6 per cent—7 per cent, (two)—13 per cent—16 per cent—17 per cent—20 per cent—22 per cent—24 per cent.

These tests furnished absolute proof of the efficiency of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in building haemoglobin, the results, as a whole, being considered remarkable, particularly those showing increases of 20 per cent, 22 per cent and 24 per cent in one month.

The Albatross

"An extraordinary experience!" I said.

"No, I went when it was peaceful and calm. But when this man went, two hundred years ago ... his name was Beck ... he said through a storm which should have destroyed him. He wrote that the forked lightning was so low that it passed between the masts. Meteors fell on the ship and burned. There seems to have been a miracle which carried her through the storm. When he turned north again, with the storm past and the Andes rising against the sky, so that he could see them, so close were they into the shore, they came upon a hulk, a ghost-ship, he called it. Of course, his fancy may have been distorted by the strain of the storm. But others say that have seen the strange ghost-ship of the Horn and heard its bells. They ring through the mists and rain, whether there is a storm or whether it is calm. This good man Beck wrote about ten pages in this curious little yellow diary of his. And he said the ship was transparent like a human ghost."

"And what of the albatross?" Surely they were not there so soon after the storm."

"That is the magic touch and end of Beck's story," added Angermann. "He wrote that at the ghost-ship, moved slowly past, with his own sailors shivering on the deck, the Catholics among them crossing and reciting their rosaries through their agitated fingers, eleven great white birds of conversation we had together. It circled over the transparent hulk; it is difficult to choose just those occasions and moments which contribute to this story of the strange and most versatile man I have ever met."

"No, but Beck added, his assurance that the story of the albatross was true—that the birds bore the souls of the sailors who had perished in the ship when she was burned. There are many early manuscripts written by sailors, and every post has its legend about the birds. I am a matter-of-fact German scholar," Angermann added.

"Your treatise on albatrosses," said one night. "It was very good. But much has been discovered since then."

"Ah, but this is not the ghost of an animal. The living bird: you yourself have said that they have a physical body at death, why can't it be made to pass from one person to another in life—or from one man to another over the water he animal to another? The spirit or soul of the bird is as separate from the body as if it were a bird in an open cage. Why cannot the soul—the spirit of dead sailors. If I am very tired of my physical body," he said.

"He talked on this night and on other nights, and there was no hindrance to the interest of listening to him and no hindrance to the physical bonds, can pass to another physical body at death, why can't it be made to pass from one person to another in life—or from one man to another over the water he animal to another? The spirit or soul of the bird is as separate from the body as if it were a bird in an open cage. Why cannot the soul—the spirit of dead sailors. If

ISLAM RELIGION DEFENDED

Not Glorified "Grave Worship."

LECTURE IN LONDON

London.—The wide spread European belief that Islam is a form of glorified "grave worship" was strongly denied by Sardar Iqbal Ali Shah, the Afghan traveller and author, in a lecture at the Near East Association.

He spoke on the "Holy Places of Islam." Sir Dennison Ross, the famous Orientalist, presided.

Sardar Iqbal Ali Shah explained that the Muslim conception of a Holy place was a shrine where pilgrims received spiritual benefit by becoming spiritually stirred out of their physical or worldly wants through prayer and meditation.

He admitted that some Muslims only made pilgrimages in order to gain material benefits, but he asserted that these false pilgrims received no benefit from the occult influences which pervaded Muslim Holy places.

It was in this spirit that countless true Muslims visited the holy places. Even the most illiterate pilgrim knew that all prayers of a materialistic origin could never be fulfilled.

The lecture was illustrated by many lantern slides of Muslim Holy places including several which had never been visited by non-Muslims.—Reuter.

THE ALBATROSS

was swallowed into the agitated white feathers.

When the albatross moved away from the ship, Angermann had disappeared into the great white body which was flying away into the night. The moment was so fantastic that I could not believe in it. I ran back to the saloon. I can remember kicking my coffee cup along the deck and leaving it broken in the scuppers. Angermann was not in the saloon, nor was he in his cabin. I was afraid to tell anybody of what I had seen. I had a sneaking fear of appearing ridiculous. So I sat in the saloon and waited. It was twelve o'clock before Angermann came in—he ate a piece of apfelkuchen, drank a glass of beer, and went to his cabin.

Two days after this was the birthday of Lewisohn. On this night, Captain Angermann dined alone in his cabin and Lewisohn enjoyed the escape from his vigilance. Indeed, he sent bottles of wine and egnac around the table and became so drunk himself that we sat up, in stiff fear, hoping that Angermann would not come in and sober him. Lewisohn was more pathetic than terrible. He had sneaking feet and shifting eyes. Even in his uniform he managed to reveal his vulgarity. A yellow handkerchief, a bracelet on his wrists, hairless wrist.

He drank a last glass of cognac, smacking the table with his left hand and giving us a toast which was a silly, meaningless indecency. At that moment Captain Angermann came into the saloon, quietly. He stood behind Lewisohn and snatched the glass from his hand. Lewisohn jumped to his uncertain feet and, as he reeled, Angermann pinned his arms behind his back and pushed him out of the saloon. Within a minute the Captain was back again; angry and black, but too certain of his self-control to speak in anything but a slow, quiet voice. He spoke to me. "I am sorry and ashamed for my ship that you should see this. He will not dine in the saloon again."

"It is his birthday, Captain Angermann," I pleaded.

CANADA HAS TWO SEA SERPENTS

"Sleek Creature" Seen Off Island.

MONSTROUS CLAMS CLAIMED

Victoria, Vancouver Island, British Columbia.

The latest development in the world struggle to produce the biggest monster (and Canadians are sneering at the Loch Ness "seal") is the news that Canada possesses a pair of sea serpents. They call them "Caddy" and "Amy."

"Caddy," the male monster, is said to be short for Cadborosaurus. No-one knows why his mate is known as "Amy" . . .

Two men of Pender Island, Messrs Cyril B. Andrews and Norman Georgeson, have signed an affidavit that they saw Amy swallow a wounded duck.

She was a "sleek creature" very different from Caddy, whose back is reported to be lumpy-like a sheet of corrugated iron. Further sensation has been caused by the theory advanced by a Vancouver fisherman, of 43 years experience. He calls attention to monstrous claims which he claims to have discovered at several places on Puget Sound.

These clams, he says, were sometimes 18 inches across the shell and had protruding necks of about 2 feet in length. He suggests they are the unhatched progeny of future sea serpents.—Reuter.

GEES DECIDE DISPUTE

Peasants' Novel Method Of Settling Claim.

Budapest. Geese, claimed by two peasants in different villages, decided the dispute themselves.

They were taken by gendarmes to the boundary between the two villages.

They marched straight to the home of the man who said they had been taken from him. He was immediately declared the owner.—Reuter.

COOKERY MUSEUM IN GERMANY

Celebrates Twenty-fifth Anniversary.

ONLY ONE IN WORLD

Berlin. Germany's Cookery Museum, which claims to be the only one of its kind in the world, has just celebrated its 25th anniversary.

It was opened 25 years ago by the International Cook's Association in the headquarters of the association at Frankfurt.

In one section the whole process of making soups is shown. Another section is devoted to sauces, a third to edible fungi, and so on through every branch of the art of cookery.

The historical department contains ancient recipe books, articles on cooking and descriptions of table decorations of many centuries ago.

There is also a collection of cooking utensils dating from the days of primitive man down to modern times.—Reuter.
